

UNIVERSITY INSTITUTE OF
HUMANE LETTERS
ADVANCING HUMANITY

The University Institute of Humane Letters, UIHL, is an international research, awards and honors, online, distance and entity of excellence, integrity, humane letters and philanthropy sorely dedicated to the advancement of humanity through improving its practice and enhancing participation through philanthropy, research, fundraising and management while simultaneously acknowledging, celebrating and honoring philanthropists through humane letters exploits.

With a multi global presence, network and foot print in Estonia, Belize, Mauritius, the UAE, Oman, Qatar, America and London only but to mention a few, UIHL, believes that the practice of advancing humanity can never be attained academically at any juncture and as such this positive approach is wholly justified as individuals who advance humanity and practice philanthropy are born and live a life of philanthropy and advancing humanity.

UIHL, exclusively bestows upon and accord's distinctively and authoritatively philanthropists and humanitarian practitioners with the International Non Academic Honorary Doctorate of Humane letters Award and accord's its honorary doctorate award holders' full rights, obligations, benefits, stature and full titles of the title Doctor, Dr, of Human Letters award, honoris causa, DHL, as opposed to other Institutions and entitles.

This invariably means that the only form of recognition, respect and honor that can truly reflect their gesture of acknowledgment, appreciation, honor and awards can only be attained through the conferment and attainment of the Honorary Doctor of Humane Letters, DHL, award

Honorary Doctorate of Humane Letters, DHL, Award

The Honorary Doctorate of Humane Letters award, cannot be given via academic efforts but instead must be gained through significant contributions to society, humanity and philanthropy.

Forming good relationships with various institutions, while keeping good records of process increase the likelihood of a DHL award nomination. Even after nomination, however a person is not guaranteed receipt of the title, as committees review all nominations to decide who will receive the honorary doctorate of humane letters award.

The Honorary Doctorate of Humane Letters award is classed an "honoris causa". This translates literally to "for the sake of honor: meaning that the award is an honorary title meant to show respect.

As an honoris causa award, the Honorary Doctor of Humane Letters distinction is not the same as an academic or earned degree. With an academic degree, a student earns his, her title based on successful completion of required coursework.

An organization gives an honoris causa degree when the recipient has contributed significantly to society or to his field. In this way, the DHL award is recognition of practical application of expertise in humanities or philanthropic areas.

Understanding that an Honorary Doctor of Humane Letters award is not an academic award, the only real way to obtain one is to engage in activities that work for the betterment of society. Many routes towards this are possible, however. For instance, a person might aid communities through religious activities, social work or even politics.

Although even entry-level in such areas are important, the DHL award is designed for those who have caused significant change or who have preserved something societies tend to see as valuable through multiple generations. This translates to necessity for individuals to strive for position of leadership which can mean higher education or additional field-specific training.

As a person works for his community, he should keep records for his work. This is important because even though the effects of a person's work might be long-reaching, the public does not always keep careful track of exact protocols or duty assignments.

Records prove that particular effects are attributed to a specific individual. Over time, an individual can compile the records to evidence the entire weight of a DHL candidate's work.

The Honorary Doctor of Humane Letters award is hinged upon the basic precepts that underlie any human or organization act of good and selflessness that encourages others to not only give but ensure that their giving has an impact on society. It is such acts of philanthropy coupled with a strong belief that when excellence is recognized, encouraged and awarded, that then the values of transparency, accountability and integrity become part and parcel of the practice.

The Institute seeks to above all create a deeper understanding of the Philanthropic environment with today's world by highlighting the achievements of the sector and bridging the information divide that is the characteristics of the sector presently.

Honorary Doctorate of Humane Letters holders and Honorary Award recipients of the Institute join a network of distinguished leaders actively working for positive change and development through philanthropy.

UIHL provides among others

Recognition for leadership in strengthening communities and advancing the field of humane advancements and philanthropy.
Exclusive convening's with other world leaders in philanthropy and humane advancements.
Peer to peer leadership learning and idea sharing.
In-depth research to inform and report leadership perspectives on giving.
Unique opportunity for media exposure
Working with the Institute allows you and or your company or organization to stand as a leadership in philanthropy and humane advancements.
From high-level strategic inspiration to data-driven tactical support, our resources enable philanthropist and giving professionals to make informed decisions that can raise the level and quality of their community programs.

Professor Emeritus of Humane Letters, Honorary Professorship Award

In order to safeguard professional status, the Institute take particular care upon whom it confers the title Honorary Professor Emeritus. Honorary Professors should be of equivalent national, international standing in their field as University of Professors are in theirs. However, as they may not necessarily be academics, criteria other than research and philanthropy will need to be considered.
Such individuals may not have academic credentials (e.g., publications) normally associated with Professorship, yet are of such standing that an honorary Professorship is an appropriate title to reflect their national and international achievements in business philanthropy and society etc. Criteria other than research and educational publications will need to be considered.

Mission

To develop more strategic, effective and suitable Philanthropic and humane practices that result in more powerful impacts. We take broad view of how Philanthropists can promote social progress, encouraging members to tap their skills, knowledge, experience and influence and not just their financial resources.

Vision

To significantly increase the understanding of Philanthropy and humane advancement and improve its practice for the benefit of human kind.

Values

Giving to those in need is often considered an altruistic action in many cultures and religions.

Altruism

It is the principle or practice of concern for the welfare of others. It is a traditional virtue in many cultures and a core aspect of various religious traditions, through the concept of 'others' toward whom concern should be directed can vary among cultures and religions. Altruism is the opposite of selfishness.

Transparency and accountability

We engage our members and all stakeholders in a manner that is open, constructive and consistent with our values.

Integrity

We are committed to principles of trustworthiness and incorruptibility in order to build the credibility of the Institute and its members. Our members are committed to the organization's code of ethics and shall be guided by honest and principles of moral conduct.

Social Justice

Taking its key notions to include: equality in access to opportunity, fairness and rights, we are committed to the principles of equity, gender, diversity and pluralism as its development value.

Partnership and Collaboration

We seek to continually develop working relationships with other like-minded organizations. We are committed to contributing towards an enabling environment that stimulates investment in social development. We practice and promote mutual support and respect. We provide a safe environment for continuous learning.

Objectives, among others

- To foster and nurture Philanthropy and advance Humanity worldwide.
- To create a vibrant network of membership, partnership, associations and affiliations so as to expand our strategic social development alliances and support networks.
- To acknowledge, celebrate and honor Philanthropists with the Honorary Doctorate of Humane Letters award.
- To accord and bestow honorary decorations of human letters, and any other form of honor or award to deserving candidates as deemed by the institute.
- To facilitate participation in key global events where Philanthropist and social investors interact and engage one another.
- To provide resources and impartial advice to aspiring Philanthropist and humanitarians who want to give effectively.
- Developing and stimulating the development of initiatives aimed at nurturing and supporting the growth of local giving, resource mobilization and effective Philanthropy for suitable development.
- Supporting capacity building initiatives and documenting knowledge in the areas of endowment building, Foundation building, Philanthropy and other core areas of interest to Philanthropist.
- Developing and strengthening partnerships with Governments, Civil Society, Private Sector, Development Partner, Faith Based Organizations and other Global Philanthropy Support Organizations, and advancing humanity on common areas of interests.
- Raising and acquisition of funds from any legitimate sources and disbursement of these towards the furtherance of our objectives.

Humane Letters, Faith, Religion, Philanthropy and Advancing Humanity

Throughout centuries, faith has been a powerful component of philanthropic generosity and humane advancement.

Faith, Religion and Giving foster a greater understanding of the ways in which faith both inspires and promotes giving by providing knowledge, education, and training.

The University Institute of Humane Letters, UIHL, encourages people of all religious orientations and spiritual practices to become more thoughtful in their philanthropic efforts. By creating a neutral environment for religious and philanthropic practitioners, scholars and the public at large. The Institute helps people to engage in reflection and conversation about the role of religion's ultimate taboo topic of money.

Humane Letters & Corporate Philanthropy, also known as Corporate Social Responsibility mirrors individual philanthropy and the advancement of humanity except for the fact that an organization, not an individual, is donating funds time, talent, facilities, property, services, or advertising support sometimes called in-kind gifts. This may also involve setting up employee voluntary group that then donate their time and knowledge.

Humane Letters & Women's Philanthropy, the confluences of demographic changes, data and research create a vivid image of women's increasing power and influence in society. As such the Institute seek to deepen the understanding of women's philanthropy through research, education and training. Research, the centerpiece of an Institute programs, links women's philanthropy to the changes, in the world around us that encourage, hinder and shape it.

Humane Letters & Youth Philanthropy, is the donation of time, energy or resources including money by children and youth towards philanthropic cause. According to one study, "youth philanthropy is, at the broadest level, youth giving of their time, talents and treasure. It is seen as an effective means in which youth develop knowledge of and participate in philanthropic projects such as volunteering, grant writing and community service. Youth philanthropy educates young people about social change in order to identify community problems design the most appropriate solutions in a systemic way. It is also identified as a particularly effective means for educating children and youth about volunteering and civic engagement.

By Order:
University Institute Of Humane Letters
Thus Done n The Year Of Our Lord Twenty Twenty Four

www.humaneletters.org